

Commerce Amendment Bill

Government Bill

As reported from the Economic Development, Science and Innovation
Committee

Commentary

Recommendation

The Economic Development, Science and Innovation Committee has examined the Commerce Amendment Bill and recommends that it be passed with the amendments shown.

Introduction

The bill seeks to amend the Commerce Act 1986 so it can better fulfil its purpose of promoting competition. In particular, the bill would strengthen the prohibition against misuse of market power in section 36 of the Act. It would also make other changes to improve the way the Act works.

The bill seeks to address problems with how the section 36 provisions are interpreted and applied. At present, the provisions:

- may fail to deter or penalise some forms of anti-competitive conduct
- can be costly and complex to enforce, which reduces incentives for businesses to comply
- can be unpredictable in their application to business conduct.

The bill would replace the current test in section 36 that focuses on whether a company's conduct "takes advantage of" its substantial market power. Instead, conduct would be linked to its purpose, effects, or likely effects. The bill would prohibit people with substantial market power from engaging in conduct that has the purpose, effect, or likely effect of substantially lessening competition in a market.

Other proposed changes in the bill include:

- removing provisions in the Act that exempt some conduct involving intellectual property rights from prohibitions against anti-competitive conduct
- aligning the rules relating to prohibitions of cartel behaviour in covenants with those in contracts
- clarifying how the Act applies to interests in land
- increasing the maximum penalties for anti-competitive business acquisitions and mergers so they align with penalties relating to anti-competitive agreements
- increasing the maximum number of Commerce Commission members from 6 to 8
- expressly empowering the Commerce Commission to share information with other government agencies or regulators in certain situations.

Legislative scrutiny

As part of our consideration of the bill, we have examined its consistency with principles of legislative quality. We have no issues regarding the legislation's design to bring to the attention of the House.

Proposed amendments

This commentary covers the main amendments we recommend to the bill as introduced. We do not discuss minor or technical amendments.

Aligning rules for trans-Tasman markets

Section 36 of the Act prohibits misuse of market power in New Zealand markets. Clause 14 of the bill would amend section 36 to strengthen and clarify this prohibition.

We believe the same changes should also be applied to section 36A. Section 36A has similar prohibitions against Australian or trans-Tasman firms, with substantial market power, taking advantage of that power in a New Zealand market. As introduced, the bill would not make any changes to section 36A.

We recommend that the test in section 36A be changed so that it is consistent with the proposed changes to the section 36 test. If section 36A is not amended, we are concerned it would create a double standard based on where the firm has substantial market power. This could result in a firm based in Australia being treated more leniently than firms based in New Zealand, for identical conduct affecting New Zealand markets. We therefore recommend amending clause 14 of the bill to replace section 36A so that it is consistent with the proposed changes to section 36.

To give effect to this we also propose various consequential amendments, including to clause 5 and the insertion of a new clause 5A.

Aligning rules relating to covenants and contracts

Section 30 of the Act prohibits people from entering into a contract that contains a cartel provision, or giving effect to a cartel provision. Under section 82B of the Act, it is a criminal offence to contravene section 30 with the intention of engaging in cartel conduct. Section 82B came into force in April 2021.

One of the purposes of the bill is to ensure that cartel provisions in covenants are prohibited in the same way as cartel provisions in contracts are. Clauses 9 and 10 of the bill, as introduced, would amend sections 30 and 30A of the Act so that it also prohibited giving, requiring the giving of, or giving effect to a covenant that contained a cartel provision.

The criminal offence in section 82B came into force after this bill was introduced. We recommend inserting clause 27A into the bill to make section 82B apply to the changes proposed in clauses 9 and 10. That is, it would be a criminal offence to contravene the bill's prohibition on cartel provisions in covenants.

Changes to the Commerce Commission's authorisation powers

In some instances, anti-competitive conduct might be in the public interest. An example might be where competing businesses work together to aid in dealing with the effects of COVID-19. In these instances, it may be desirable to allow that behaviour even though it might otherwise contravene the Act.

Section 58 of the Act allows the Commerce Commission to grant authorisation for conduct that is otherwise likely to contravene the Act. Under section 61, the Commission must be satisfied that the conduct is likely to result in a net benefit to the public interest. We propose some amendments, discussed below, to improve administration of the authorisation scheme.

Provisional approval powers

At present, after a person makes an application for authorisation under section 58, the Commission must issue a determination within 120 working days (or longer by agreement with the applicant) stating whether the application is approved or declined. Until a determination is made, if the conduct breaches a restrictive trade practice it would be unlawful.

However, there may be situations where the need for authorisation is time sensitive. Recognising this, the COVID-19 Response (Further Management Measures) Legislation Act 2020 created a temporary ability for the Commerce Commission to issue "provisional authorisation" to an applicant. That ability will cease six months after the Epidemic Preparedness (COVID-19) Notice 2020 expires.

We believe that the changes made by the COVID-19 legislation should be made permanent. COVID-19 has demonstrated that there may be compelling public interest reasons to authorise conduct before the full procedure for deciding an application can be completed. Making this permanent would improve the Act's administration.

We therefore recommend inserting clause 23A to the bill to make permanent the power to issue a provisional authorisation. This clause would add a new section 65AAA to the Act, allowing the Commission to grant interim authorisation while it undertakes the full process for determining an application.

Expanding the scope of the authorisation powers

As the Act stands, section 58 allows the Commission to authorise trade practices that would otherwise contravene section 27 (prohibiting anti-competitive agreements), section 28 (prohibiting anti-competitive covenants), or sections 37 and 38 (prohibiting resale price maintenance).

Clause 19 of the bill, as introduced, would amend section 58 to expand the Commission's powers to authorise any conduct covered by the proposed new section 36. We agree with this expansion. As discussed above, we believe that conduct under section 36A should be treated the same as conduct under section 36. We therefore believe that section 58 should also apply to section 36A.

We also believe there may be examples of situations where a cartel provision may be in the public interest. Should such a situation arise, it would be important that the Commission's authorisation powers extended to conduct that would otherwise contravene any prohibition on cartel conduct.

We therefore recommend amending clause 19, section 58 of the Act. Our changes would give the Commission the power to authorise conduct prohibited by section 36A and directly authorise any of the cartel conduct prohibited by section 30.

Changes to transitional provisions

As introduced, the bill would allow long lead times before certain provisions took effect. We recommend some changes to reduce these lead times.

Implementation timeline for repealing section 45

Section 45 of the Act provides certain exceptions to conduct involving intellectual property (IP) rights. Clause 15 of the bill would repeal section 45. In the bill as introduced, clause 15 would take effect 12 months after the bill received Royal assent. The delayed commencement is to allow time for the Commerce Commission to produce guidelines to assist affected parties.

Repealing this exception might mean that some existing agreements would then be prohibited if they are anti-competitive. If an anti-competitive agreement involving IP rights had been negotiated in reliance on the exception provided by section 45, the value of the agreement might be reduced if section 45 were repealed. If the bill is passed, it is possible that some existing agreements relating to IP rights may need to be renegotiated. To account for this, the bill would allow existing agreements to continue relying on the section 45 exception, for a transitional period, after its repeal.

The bill's Schedule would insert several clauses into Schedule 1AA of the Act. Clause 13 of the bill's Schedule, as introduced, would create a 3-year transitional period. Clause 18 of the Schedule would allow any agreements entered into before section 45 was repealed to continue to rely on the section 45 exception during the 3-year transitional period.

Clause 18 would come into force one year after the bill received Royal assent, and the 3-year transitional period for affected agreements would begin on that date. Consequently, the bill as introduced might not influence existing anti-competitive agreements relating to IP rights for four years after the bill received Royal assent.

We believe this period is too long. We think a total of two years would be sufficient for existing IP agreements to be adjusted as necessary. We are concerned that people might take advantage of the 12-month period before section 45 would be repealed and enter into a new IP rights agreement that was anti-competitive. They would then benefit from anti-competitive aspects of the agreement being unaffected until the end of the 3-year transitional period.

We therefore recommend amending clauses 13 and 18 of the bill's Schedule to reduce the transitional period from 3 years to 1 year.

Implementation timeline for prohibition on cartel provisions in covenants

The bill's commencement clause proposes that the prohibition on cartel provisions in covenants would come into force one year after the bill received Royal assent. Clause 15 of the bill's Schedule would also apply the 3-year transitional period to existing covenants which contain a cartel provision.

For the same reasons discussed above, we believe this four-year lead time is too long. Parties bound by existing covenants would need to cease giving effect to any cartel provisions in the covenant, or have the covenant removed under the Property Law Act 2007. However, we believe that the timeframe for effecting this change should be the same as for agreements affected by the repeal of section 45.

We recommend that our proposal to reduce the transitional period from 3 years to 1 year should also apply to these provisions. Consequently, we recommend amending clause 15 of the bill's Schedule for this purpose.

New maximum penalty under section 83

Clause 28 of the bill would amend section 83 of the Act to increase the maximum penalty for anti-competitive acquisitions and mergers. In the bill as introduced, this increase would come into force 12 months after the bill received Royal assent. We do not believe a 12-month lead time is necessary. The increase in the maximum penalty would not affect liability for actions taken before the amendment came into force. This means that a delay would only benefit people engaging in anti-competitive acquisitions or mergers in the 12 months after the bill was passed.

We recommend amending the commencement provisions in clause 2 so that clause 28 would instead come into force one month after the bill received Royal assent.

Commerce Commission should prepare guidance

We believe it is important that people understand clearly how the bill's changes would affect them. The bill's delayed commencement dates would give time for people to become familiar with the new requirements and ensure they are compliant before the changes came into effect.

The Commerce Commission is New Zealand's competition authority and regulator. One of its functions is to provide information about the purposes and provisions of the Commerce Act. We would expect the Commission to release timely and detailed guidance to help market participants understand the provisions in the bill. Guidance might also outline how the Commission intends to enforce the provisions. It would be especially important for explaining how people might be affected by the proposed changes to the section 36 and 36A test, and the repeal of section 45.

We are satisfied with the Commission's assurance that it intends to do this.

New Zealand National Party differing view

This bill amends the Commerce Act 1986. The two key provisions are the changes to an effects-based test under section 36 and the repeal of intellectual property safe harbours. National remains concerned about the effect on pro-competitive behaviour that these changes could have, and the potential for resulting detrimental outcomes for consumers.

Section 36

The bill changes competition rules for dominant market players from an intention to be anti-competitive to business decisions that have the unintended consequence of altering competition in a market. The National Party believes this test should be amended from "intent (purpose), effect, or likely effect" to be anti-competitive to "intent (purpose) or likely effect". Removal of the "effect" condition limits the restrictions to foreseeable consequences of commercial actions. As drafted, firms with market power risk liability for unforeseeable future consequences, leading to overly-conservative decision making on their part. This is likely to deter competitive conduct, to the detriment of consumers in the long term. The regulatory impact assessment prepared by MBIE supports this view.

Legitimate business justification

A legitimate business justification defence should be included in Section 36 of the bill, consistent with international precedent. While the Commerce Commission has assured us that they will not pursue proceedings against standard commercial conduct, this should be specified in the bill. The Commission may not bring proceedings against legitimate businesses; this does not preclude third parties from doing so.

Intellectual property safe harbours

National opposes the repeal of intellectual property safe harbours proposed in this bill. Businesses require confidence to invest in and license their IP. Intellectual property rights have no intrinsic value. Rather, the value lies in the statutory rights that allow for the enforcement of IP. Repealing certain safe harbours in this bill will make New Zealand an outlier internationally, discourage investment in IP and R&D, and have a chilling effect on pro-competitive licensing of intellectual property to competitors and other third parties.
